Welcome To The Harsh Reality Of Job Hunting

It's an absolutely brutal job market out there with most groups of job seekers resembling a big herd of cattle playing some sort of twisted job search "lotto game" just hoping to get lucky.

What kind of sick "strategy" is that? Talk about a recipe for repeated failure and settling for less.

Listen, whether you're looking to flip burgers at "Sally's Bar and Grill" or become vice president of a Fortune 500 company. I've got a major newsflash for you...

Before you sit down in the "hot seat" for your next job interview you MUST ask yourself the most important question of all:

"Why in the world should this company hire ME over all the other applicants?"

Because I have a better resume?

Because I dress in style and smell good?

Because I show up on time?

Because I answer questions so brilliantly?

Because I make good eye contact?

Because I shake hands firmly without sweaty palms?

Because I got a terrific new haircut?

Because I took a course on how to "ace" the job interview?

The Job Interview Secret

NO! With this approach you're just another ANT in the job-seeker "ant farm."
Stop milling around! Give yourself a REAL advantage by doing something totally UNIQUE.

The moment you get called for a job interview you're on even footing with all other applicants.

Haircuts, handshakes, fashionable clothes and an attractive smile aren't enough.

But what is?

How can you stand out from all the other applicants during the job interview process?

How can you do this so effectively that an employer feels compelled to hire you for fear of losing you to another company?

AH-HA... great questions!

You see, landing your dream job has nothing to do with memorizing twenty-one of the most popular interview questions from that "ace the job interview" book you just read.

Everyone prepares for the job interview this way. You'll ALWAYS be on a level playing field at best, even when you think you're so prepared.

WOW! Read Me First Document – You'll start here.
through my "WOW... You're Hired!" System quickly, Easily and step-by-step.

Things To Do On A Job Interview

Staying calm and collected involves in the process of preparing for job interview. You need to know the answers, keep your mind clear and accessible for the possible enquiries that you will be made, but how are you going to sail through if you do not just choose to stay calm and collected while preparing for a job interview? You will need to be able to be fully present with awareness for the job interview session and to this you must be relaxed and quiet your mind.

Make sure that you have had some quiet days before your interviews. You have to choose to discipline your mind through daily meditation. Controlling daily sleep hours also help you to achieve what you wish for. You will have a quiet and reflective presence, all of which work in ways better than you might know about reading a thousand books.

While preparing for a job interview it is expected that you are well read through your area of studies or specialization but it is equally important that you pick up some very wonderful and real self help tips that optimize your people interacting skills.

So while preparing for a job interview it would be also wise to pick up a book that gives you tips on breathing techniques for instant calm, a Dale Carnegie book that involves you understand some aspects of speaking right after you say hello and so on.

These are essential landmarks that you do not want to miss if you are willing to create a detailed and charismatic impression of yourself. Though it is encouraged that you stay positive and hone your speaking skills as part of the preparing for job interview process, it is never told that you go beyond your own element to win elements.

The Job Interview Secret

Remember you are looking for a job that suits you and that gets your purpose raised. If it is not meant for you, it is just not meant for you. But though you should be open to the field of all possibilities and never give out any negative vibe, you are totally encouraged to be yourself and speak your own mind. If you really cannot honor yourself you cannot honor anyone across the table.

As a mode of preparing for job interview preparation it would be a good idea to check in with people who are already working in the concern to casually understand what you are expected to be and do in your current job.

There is nothing like talking to a senior who already works there who might be able to help you through the process of the interview. Overall staying in the moment and absolutely calm helps you keep your peace and poise through any number of stumbling questions that you might be thrown at.

You must at all point keep your calm and voice your opinions and answers firmly. Never go into any debating or arguing mode with an interviewer even if you are called to do so. Understand that most interviewers are experienced with personality assessment skills.

WOW! Audio – This is the amazing interview I conducted with Jake from Atlanta. It's about one hour long and will be the most exciting information you've ever heard regarding your job search and how easy it is to get hired using the 'Secret Career Document' and my " WOW... You're Hired!" system. You can download the audio to your computer or just click and listen from our special members-only website anytime you'd like 24 hours a day.

Useful Tips To Know Before Going For A Job Interview

Certain jobs in life would require following a basic parameter but if you stick by the simplest and most decent of job interview tips, there is no denying that you will create an ever lasting impression.

One of the very first things that people notice about you when you come to a job is your grooming. So never underestimate this aspect of your appearance when days before you are heading for the job interview.

Grooming means having a good, stylish haircut that looks contemporary but not over the edge, filing your nails, shaving neatly if you are a guy and having an overall clean and crisp presence.

A good job interview tip is to wear neat and semi formal clothes. If you are heading for an interview to a concern, it is good to check out what others in the company or in the similar field generally wear to office.

With this you will have a basic idea of what you are expected to wear in your first job interview. It is a good job interview tip to go and get your image and looks a brush up a day before the interview. This may mean shaving and cleaning up for the men, and going for a nice cut, manicure and skin clean up or facial for the women.

What also works with the interesting details coming with the grooming up process is that you know how to play with your looks and how to extend that process in a really confident manner.

Your confidence in your looks really seeps into your personality and it creates for a charming presence. So looking good is an essential aspect of your overall presentation. A recent survey has found out that people who look good get an upper hand in jobs than people who look average.

The Job Interview Secret

You might be lucky in job, love and life overall if you take care of your looks. It is a good job interview tip to remember that more than your credentials your look, whether it be frumpy or elegant, will be noticed first.

Of course the main aspect of the interview is assessing your intrinsic qualities as well as your professional experiences and educational qualifications. But if you are well groomed and neat you only extend the flavor of your remarkable qualities beyond a simplistic edge.

So it is a hot job interview tip to make sure that you have the appropriate clothing in your wardrobe. When you are going for an interview it is essential that you look dapper with mellow or subdued tones.

You can choose something soothing in shade that is relaxing to you as well as pleasant to the viewer. Stay away from anything experimental in your wardrobe when you are in for an interview.

You will need to be comfortable and confident in yourself and relaxed with what you are wearing. Sticking to shades like navy, grey, lavender, green, etc. make for a relaxed presence.

Take A Look At Some Job Interview Questions And Their Right Answers

Questions are an integral part of a job interview. The key to brave them is to know their answers before hand. Here is a look at some sample job interview questions. Also provided are some suitable job interview answers to these questions. All these job interview questions are really common.

"Tell us something about yourself."

The right answer to this question focuses both on the personal as well as professional qualities. The key is to be honest, but always talk only about one's best traits. The traits that relate to the desired job should especially be mentioned. It would also help to highlight some of the proudest experiences and accomplishments.

"What is your greatest strength?"

The answer to this question should highlight one's best skills. It would be smart not to pick just one skill but, focus on the top three or four skills instead. It would help to mention those skills that are required for that particular job.

"What is your greatest weakness?"

This question demands a really careful answer. Mentioning something just for the heck of it can be a real problem. Instead, the right thing to do is relate a weakness that is not a key element required to get the job. This will help to maintain the honesty and leave the right impression.

"How do you handle a stressful situation?"

The right way to answer this is to relate some stressful situations dealt with in the past. One should mention that how he or she used skills like problem solving, time management and decision-making to reduce the stress.

"How did you overcome the toughest problem you ever faced?"

The key to answering this question is to relate a problem that was faced by one's previous organization. Remember the bigger the problem is the solution will appear to be better.

It always helps to mention the techniques and skills used to deal with such problems. The successful results should be emphasized. There should not be an attempt to take the whole credit.

"Why do you want this job?"

This answer is fully based on the research done about that particular company. The right way to start is with the explanation that there was always an inherent desire to work with that company. Also adding something about the company to the answer can help a lot.

"Why do you think you are the best person for this job?"

The key to deliver a good answer for this is to be as confident and enthusiastic as possible. It helps to emphasize the several skills and reason that makes one fit for that job. It does not help to refer to oneself as the best qualified person because one doesn't know the qualifications of the other people.

All the above job interview answers are a great form of a job interview help. These answers can help to tackle even the shrewdest interviewers.

Short And Simple Tips Of Landing In The Perfect Job In A World Of Crisis

The Global Financial Crisis that started in 2007 left many with nary a hope for stable living conditions. Millions of employees were laid off from positions in companies that they've served for years.

To the new job seeker, or the fresh grad, this is a double edged dagger. Positions are left empty, available to the cheapest yet most efficient and eager worker. At the same time, companies are tightening up loose screws; empty seats are also reserved for who they see as the best of the best in the market.

The fact is, the job market is getting tighter and tighter and more unpredictable. How you do in a job interview may very well be the only thing that stands between you and your dream career.

A lot of things factor in to your getting the job you want. This includes your educational background, previous experience, your personal references, even how you write your resume.

The Job Interview Secret

Consider the job itself. Sometimes, people think that how you perform at job interviews doesn't matter to a type of work that doesn't involve speaking or representing yourself (like for instance, a graphic designer, or a mechanical engineer). Wrong. How you speak and present yourself is always important in whatever field you may specialize in.

A big, often overlooked factor in getting into the career you want is your job interview skills.

The people who interview prospective employees can be the biggest sharks in the business. This is a business strategy. If you can muster the guts, the wits, and the guile to get past a formidable hurdle early on, then maybe, you can start a career with them –whatever expertise you may have to offer.

A good resume can only get you so far up this first hurdle. Same with a diploma from a good university, or that cum laude tag college kids are so proud about.

It's said that just showing up, just getting to an interview is 99% of the work already done, but they never factored in how hard that remaining 1% is to do. That 1% is the job interview answers, sealing the deal while you're there. It's what counts.

With the world in its present condition of financial ruin and chaos, already tight hiring policies are tweaked even tighter. It's harder than ever to land a job.

And if you're still in college, imagine how harder it will be to get your dream job after a couple more years. If today, job interview preparation takes a lot of effort, what then years from now?

Consider the strategies you already know in landing an A on a job interview: looking as sharp as you can, polishing up an impressive resume with a list of your most tremendous accomplishments, getting a former employer to write a convincing review of your good character and work ethic –all these traditional methods amount to squat nowadays.

The Job Interview Secret

These days, you have to be unique. A person needs a way to be ready, to stand out from the crowd of the millions of jobseekers out there. In the market, there are professional job interview tips to give you the edge, the job interview skills to help you sit on your dream career.

WOW! Top Ten Tips – Once you're finished creating your own 'Secret Career Document' you'll quickly apply these top ten tips to make yours sizzle.

Find Your Way To A Happier Life By Finding A Career That Suits You

It was Confucius who said that if you found the perfect job, something you are passionate about doing, whatever it is, you won't have to work a day in your life.

The key to a happy life is finding a career that's best suited for you. How many people out there are working at a job they're unhappy with?

Here are a few reasons why able professionals, and skilled degree holders, are in jobs they're not satisfied with:

The global financial recession of 2008 leaves them barely able to cope with rising prices. Professionals just take what they can get to survive.

Less than ample job interview preparation leaves even the most skilled worker unready to face the challenges of today's job market.

The Job Interview Secret

The Global Financial Recession (2008):

The year 2008 left most of the world in panic. The inflation rate soared, and gas prices climbed every day and week, not giving any sign of letting up.

For the multinationals, the next step was to tweak their systems for optimal performance, starting with their human machinery - which led to one of the biggest layoffs in the history of the world.

The already tight job market was now more competitive, and a job hunter now needs a better set of job interview skills in order to compete.

The smallest families in the third world countries to the biggest multinational corporations of the G8 (the 8 richest and most powerful nations) had to learn to tighten their belts. Suddenly and almost overnight, everyone had to learn the value of saving up cash and resources.

What job preparation entails:

Given the present condition of the job market, even the most skilled professionals need to present themselves better and offer more.

Traditional methods of securing a job you're after may no longer be appropriate.

Teach yourself to be prepared from the start, and have the right job interview answers that might follow.

Handling Hiring Sharks:

What most people often misread as just cruelty or plain meanness is actually a business tradition and tactic.

Interviewers are supposed to be sharks; it's a way to ensure quality in the corporate world, a way to weed out the weak from the herd. The theory goes: if a person's able to hold his own in a grilling interview, then that person's more than able and resourceful enough to put on a corporate attitude to life and business – translation: a good employee.

Companies are simply screening their people well, and ensuring quality from the base up.

The wise prospective employee needs to be well rounded, not just skilled or carry a great resume, and not just good at presenting himself either.

To land a job in any career, a person need to be immersed in good job interview preparation to arm himself with job interview answers, and get that job interview follow up. It's often appropriate to write a job interview thank you letter when you are given the job, showing you're grateful for the opportunity.

WOW! Seven Point Checklist – Finally, I'll walk you through my easy seven-point checklist to make sure your 'Secret Career Document' is perfect and ready to go to work for you!

The Obstacle Race Of Job Interview

Recently, there are over 4 million unemployed people in the world. Scarcity is not just about food, shelter etc. It is also about job. Due to this, you must stand out from other applicants when you are applying for a job. But still, application is very hard. It is like entering the hole of a needle.

Job interview doesn't call yet for victory. It is just the start of your journey as an applicant. In reality, we face different challenges when it comes to job interview. Here are some of the common struggles we encounter.

The Job Interview Secret

The need for job interview preparation

Being prepared is a must. But preparing is not easy especially when it comes to job interview. Job interview preparation should include your knowledge of important information about the company-their mission, vision etc.

It also includes your choice of the proper appearance for a good impression. Job interview preparation entails much time since it is not simple.

Sometimes, you need to practice maybe in front of the camera in order to ease yourself once you are already at the real interview. You must not spend several seconds, some minutes, and few hours to prepare. Job interview preparation needs days.

Facing the interview

Preparation is not yet the end. The harder part enters when the interviewer is already in front of you. Although you have this purpose of answering the questions tactfully, you are being distracted by the unlikable feeling where you can experience leg shaking and uncomfortable feeling as the interviewer looks at you as you start expressing yourself. As a result, you often forget what to say.

Listening to the questions vigilantly is a must. Job interview answers must be very well said and is accurate to the job interview questions. Although sounds easy, in reality, this is the hardest part. Job interview skills that you have learned and practiced during your preparation will be test during the actual interview.

Job interview Thank You Letter is a must

Thanking the company whatever is the result of the interview is an obligation. Giving you the chance to be interviewed is still something to thank about. Thank you letter must be given within 24 hours. It is a mark that you had appreciated the interview.

The Job Interview Secret

But the hard part of it is when the interview was not successful. We have to face the fact that it is hard to thank someone who had affected your self-esteem negatively.

Still, although at some point it is against your will, you must send them a job interview thank you letter. Finally, you must not forget proofreading your letter. How you had written it will affect how the company views you.

Asking for job interview help from an expert will help you surpass these hardships when it comes to application for a job. This skilled individual could give you the best and used job interview tips that could help you enter the job you are dreaming for. Entering a job is not luck. It includes strategies.

The Art Of Persuasion In A Job Interview

Honing your job interview skills will require less effort than you imagine. If you're scheduled for an interview, this means that you are already qualified for the job possibly against a dozen or more other job applicants. It's just a matter of convincing the interviewer that you're the best man or woman for the job.

The art of persuasion is a very useful tool if a person knows how to use it. It will come quite in handy in any social situation, an interview for instance. It gets you what you want within an unlimited scope, the only limit being your skill at persuasion itself. Here is a list of things to remember when attempting the subtle art of persuasion:

Practice a sample job interview with a trusted person, preferably an authority figure in her or his own right. Imagine a likely situation and act it out with conviction.

This will help you objectively determine the level of skill you already possess in handling such a situation like how you talk, react and respond to what will happen.

The Job Interview Secret

It is important that the person you practice with is an authority figure, so that person conducts the interview in a formal manner similar to how the actual interview will be handled.

At this point, treat the “interviewer” as the subject whom you are attempting to persuade. Gain the trust of the subject by listening closely to their job interview questions, their comments and how they are saying it.

Try to read their body language. With each word that comes from their mouth, try to determine their present mood, their general demeanor and how they must feel.

Make your subject feel secure. Perhaps appear a little submissive to their authority. This will instill a feeling of security and safety. Show interest in what the subject is saying, smile and look at the subject as you listen and speak.

Imitate the subject. Do this subtly; you do not want to appear like you are mocking the subject that will lead to your losing their trust. Simply, match what the subject does, but in your own way. For instance, if the subject speaks loudly, then speak loudly as how you would naturally do it. Do this with each of your job interview answers.

Now, attempt to mimic the subject’s behavior. As in mimic vocabulary, actions, reactions, etc. Again, be subtle. It’s a general rule that people are more akin to people who are like them. Subconsciously, the subject is put at ease upon conversing with a person with whom they share similarities.

If you played your cards right, you should be able to influence the subject’s behavior. Notice that the subject will slowly copy the way you move your body, or the even the way you talk. Now very subtly, make hints at what you want (for instance, getting the job) and if you're successful, the subject will respond positively.

The Job Interview Secret

Persuasion, manipulation, sneaking into somebody's subconscious, these are very real but difficult job interview skills. Don't stick to a single plan as you attempt this. You're trying to work a human mind, so like it; you should be open to shifts and changes in the conversation. Tread lightly and be careful.

The "million dollar question" remains the same:

The Secrets Of Cracking A Job Interview Are No More Hushed Up.

Are you about to join the rat race of jobs and employment and you are scared of it? Of course, in today's world of economic recession, when all the companies out there are ready to decrease their number of staffs and thus, cut off their costs, landing on a good job is hard.

Do note that getting a job is not hard but nobody likes to be under-employed. Do you really want an MBA to go into selling burgers on the roadside stall? No, you don't.

So, what you do is search up job interview manuals and other informative media stuff that helps you with the various techniques of how to crack a job interview. You get magazines, CDs and DVDs training system, you look it up on the Internet. But, nothing helps you much.

All of them or at least most of them beat about the same old already-known points. They keep telling you how you should have a formal haircut, how you should wear well-ironed formal clothes, how you should shake your hands, how you should smile, how you should greet the interviewers and all such different factors. And why would you waste your money on the same stuff again and again? Yes, it is of no use.

But very few of the prospective employees know something. As they are frustrated on not landing on a suitable job, same with the employers who are looking for a candidate that will have what they are looking for.

The Job Interview Secret

Most of the candidates are just not hitting the right point according to them and they are having a hard time landing on the right one, as a matter of fact. So, it comes down to one thing, that if you have what they want and you can show that to them so that you can separate yourself from the rest of the applying candidates, you get the job.

But, where do you get to know the secrets that will separate you from the rest? Don't worry; there are several experts out there who just specialize in helping candidates like you out.

Though most are not that worthy enough but some are. One of them is Jimmy P. Sweeney. He is the president of the company Career Jimmy and also the author of the famous book "The Job Interview Secret". You can check this book now at <http://www.JobInterviewSecret.com>

He has been in this field for a quite long time, helping job-seeking candidates in very competitive job markets with his strategies all over 25 different countries. He has a new program for the job seekers called the "Secret Career Document".

He says that it is not just about preparing the right CV, not about uttering few lines to the questions asked, not about how to prepare a "brag book" or any of such things. It focuses on some simple strategies that, as he claims, will compel the employer to say, "Wow...You're Hired!"

If you have tried out different stuffs but still not satisfied, why don't you try this? Logon to <http://www.JobInterviewSecret.com> and know more about the book "The Job Interview Secret".
