Chapter One

This is a story about my uncle and aunt. And guess what? They're both called Pat!

Last year, Mum and Dad agreed I'd stay with Uncle-and-Auntie Pat during the summer holidays.

Uncle-and-Auntie Pat live at Wishing Well¹ Farm, way out of town. It isn't an easy place to find. Dad must have driven straight past without realising².

Before long, we were completely lost, and had to ask the way.

We followed the man's long list of directions. We drove through one village...

...and then another...

...over two bridges...

...past a huge³ out-of-town superstore⁴...

Finally we spotted⁷ a half-hidden⁸ broken sign⁹.

We drove up a muddy¹⁰ track¹¹, and found Uncle-and-Auntie Pat feeding the animals.

"You managed to find us, then," said Uncle Pat.

10

"Only just!" muttered¹² Dad.

Everyone greeted¹³ each other, and then just as quickly, Mum and Dad were saying their goodbyes.

I stood and waved as their car disappeared¹⁴ down the dirt track.

11

Chapter Two

12

Uncle-and-Auntie Pat soon made me feel at home. They cooked me a slap-up¹⁵ meal – heaps¹⁶ of scrambled egg, jacket potatoes and fresh vegetables followed by strawberries and cream.

Then they told me about Wishing Well Farm.

13

14

They showed me to my room, up in the attic. I had a great view of the farmyard.

15

I couldn't help noticing¹⁷ that the farm shop was very quiet. In fact, I didn't see a single customer all day.

That evening, when I came down to say goodnight, I overheard¹⁸ Uncle Pat talking with Auntie Pat. They both looked glum¹⁹ as they pored²⁰ over their accounts²¹.

16

I felt sad, but I slept soundly²³ that night, and lost myself in dreams of the old wishing well.

17

Chapter Three

18

In the morning, I was still thinking about the well.

"Uncle Pat, does the wishing well really work?" I asked.

Uncle Pat chuckled²⁴.

"How old is it then?" I asked.
"Older than the farm and that's over three hundred years old," replied Auntie Pat.

19

"Wow!" I exclaimed. "Have you ever tried making a wish?"
They both burst out laughing²⁷.

I knew Uncle-and-Auntie Pat hadn't money to spare²⁸, but I still had some of last week's pocket money.

20

I reached²⁹ in my jeans. There it was — a shiny ten pence piece.

21

I went outside to the well. It looked rather tatty³⁰, but I tried to convince³¹ myself it could be magical.

I took my ten pence coin and tossed³² it in...

22

After a few seconds, I heard it splash³³ into the water deep³⁴ below.

I spent the rest of the day helping out on the farm. I fed the geese, I picked some fruit and I dug up³⁵ some potatoes.

23

It was hard work. How I wished my wish would start working.

24

That night I fell asleep the moment my head touched the pillow. I had some magical dreams...

I dreamt the geese laid golden eggs.

25

I dreamt the fruit trees grew five pound notes.

And I dreamt I dug up some buried treasure along with the potatoes!

26

But in the morning when I woke up, I realised they were only dreams.

Chapter Four

27

The following day, it was scrambled eggs again!

It's just as well I love eggs. But I did begin to wonder if the wishing well genie had heard my wish.

After breakfast, I helped tidy up the shop. Things were as quiet as ever.

28

I decided to have a word with the wishing well genie.

"I'm still waiting for my wish to come true," I whispered.

Then a thought came to me: if the genie was at the bottom³⁷ of the well, he might not be able to hear me. Maybe I should talk a little louder. Or a lot louder.

I decided I might as well shout³⁸!

"Give me a sign, give me a sign," the wishing well echoed³⁹.

"That's it!" I thought.

I ran to give Uncle-and-Auntie Pat the message.

"He could be right," said Auntie Pat.

"You need a new sign," I said.

"So that motorists don't just whizz⁴¹ by."

Uncle Pat scratched⁴² his head.

"I suppose it's worth a try⁴³," he said at last.

So we got to work.

We didn't stop at making just one sign.

33

We made lots and lots and lots.

34

It took us all afternoon to put up the signs. They looked great.

35

No one could miss Wishing Well Farm now!

36

Chapter Five

37

The next day, business began to pick up. Not dramatically⁴⁴, but bit by bit⁴⁵.

A sack⁴⁶ of potatoes here...

...and a punnet⁴⁷ of strawberries there.

38

At one time we actually had three customers in the shop at once. That must have been a record!

39

By the next week, things were even better. Word had spread⁴⁸ about Wishing Well Farm.

I'd never noticed this place before.

It's better than the Superstore!

40

Uncle-and-Auntie Pat weren't likely to become millionaires, but business was better than it had been for years⁵⁰.

Chapter Six

41

My stay at Wishing Well Farm couldn't last forever⁵¹, and one afternoon I spotted Dad's car in the queue⁵² of vehicles⁵³ in the farmyard.

I showed them round the farm.

43

It was great to see Mum and Dad again.

42

"And last but not least⁵⁴, this is the famous wishing well," I told them.

44

They both laughed out loud. Maybe it was just a silly old legend after all.

I went and packed my bag whilst⁵⁵ the others had a cup of tea. Then I said my goodbyes to Uncle-and-Auntie Pat.

45

I decided to visit the wishing well one last time. Just in case there was a genie, I shouted "goodbye" really loudly.

46

"Goodbye, goodbye..." he shouted back.
"It's been nice meeting you..."

47

The End

Chapter One

Chapter One

This is a story about my granny.
I'm not sure how old she is.
When I ask her, all she says is,
"I'm older than yesterday, but younger than tomorrow."

I often go round to visit Granny.
She lives in a semi-detached¹ house not far from us.

Her house is like all the others in the avenue...

5

Next door to Granny lives Mr Smart. He keeps his garden very tidy.

6

His flowers all stand to attention⁵ in neat rows...

...and his lawn is as smooth⁶ as a snooker table⁷.

He clips⁸ his front hedge⁹ every Tuesday...

...and he measures¹⁰ the grass every Friday to see if it needs cutting¹¹.

Every year Mr Smart enters¹² the “Best kept Garden in Giggleswade” Competition.

And for three years in a row¹³, he's won the Silver Watering Can Award¹⁴.

Like Mr Smart, Granny spends a lot of time in the garden. But unlike Mr Smart, she doesn't spend much time actually¹⁶ gardening.

10

Granny prefers to sit quietly and listen to the insects buzzing¹⁷ and the birds singing.

Mr Smart is always dropping¹⁸ hints¹⁹...

12

...and pointing out²¹ adverts in the local paper.

But Granny doesn't take too much notice.

13

All the same, I could see that she was getting a bit worried²³ by all his hints. So at the beginning of the summer holidays, I offered to lend a hand²⁴.

Chapter Two

14

Together, Granny and I got to work on the garden. We chopped²⁵ down the nettles²⁶.

We cut back the brambles²⁷.

15

We dug up²⁸ the weeds.

We mowed²⁹ the lawn
and we rolled it flat³⁰.

16

17

We worked long and hard every day
for a fortnight³¹.

At last Granny's garden looked almost as neat³² as Mr Smart's. We sat in deckchairs and looked around us.
"It certainly looks tidy," said Granny.
"It certainly does," I agreed.

18

And it certainly did.

Even Mr Smart was impressed.

19

But Granny noticed there weren't as many little visitors to her garden.

Chapter Three

The weeks went by, and with a little help, Granny's garden began to look more like it used to³³.

When Mr Smart saw how overgrown it was getting, he wasn't at all pleased.

He suggested a few things.

But this time, Granny didn't take any notice of him. She sat back and watched the grass grow.

24

She liked the daisies³⁴...

25

...she loved the buttercups³⁵...

...and she *adored*³⁶ the dandelions³⁷ that grew on her lawn.

As the nettles returned, so did the beetles³⁸ and the butterflies.

26

And as the brambles returned, so did the birds and the bees.

We wanted to *encourage*³⁹ even more wildlife, so we put up a bird table...

27

29

...then we dug a hole...

...and lined it with plastic to make a pond.

Not everyone was pleased, though. Mr Smart for instance.

Soon we were watching birds feeding...

...and frogs and newts playing in the pond.

But Granny was happier than ever. She loved spotting grasshoppers and ladybirds.

Granny even made friends with a hedgehog who came to visit her every night. Her new improved jungle garden was her pride⁴⁴ and joy.

32

Chapter Four

33

One afternoon, Granny and I were putting scraps⁴⁵ out for the birds when I heard voices coming from Mr Smart's garden.

Suddenly a stranger⁴⁶ popped⁴⁷ his head over the fence⁴⁸.

34

"Wildlife Sanctuary?" said Granny.

The stranger said his name was Duncan Bennett.

35

Just then Mr Smart appeared⁵¹ at the fence. He didn't look very happy.

Mr Smart began to fume⁵² quietly.

Duncan explained about the competition.

"May I come round?" asked Duncan.
"Please do!" said Granny.

Granny and I showed Duncan round.

As Duncan explored⁵⁵ the jungle garden, he got more and more excited.

He made lots of notes, and then at last he asked:

Granny was almost lost for words⁵⁷, but at last managed to mutter⁵⁸ "yes".

Chapter Five

A week later, Granny received the Silver Watering Can Award from Duncan Bennett. Everyone was overjoyed.

Everyone, that is⁶⁰, except Mr Smart. He didn't agree with the result.

But there was nothing he could do about it.

News soon spread about Granny's garden. Before long she was giving guided tours to complete strangers.

Other people in the avenue now appreciate Granny's garden too.

But most importantly, the birds, bees and butterflies all agree Granny's Jungle-Garden-Wildlife-Sanctuary is the best thing in all of Giggleswade.

Chapter One

This is a story about my cousin Jenny. When I heard she was coming to stay, I wasn't exactly over the moon!

You see, Jenny enjoys all sorts of girlish² things, and I'm expected to join in³.

She likes horse riding...

...and dolls' houses...

...and, worst of all, dressing up!

So when the doorbell rang

DING-DONG!

I didn't rush⁴ to answer it.

Then Mum called from the kitchen,

I went to the front door with a heavy heart. But when I opened it, I had a surprise...

It wasn't Jenny at all. It was a little old man with a moustache⁶, a beaky⁷ nose and glasses.

"Can I help you?" I asked as he shuffled⁸ his feet.

"Fooled you, fooled you!" she chortled¹¹, as she carried in her bags. I didn't think it was all that funny actually. She took off her coat.

"Now, aren't you going to give your cousin a hug¹²?" asked Jenny sweetly.

Suddenly the "little old man" whipped off his glasses, his beaky nose and his moustache, and burst out laughing⁹.

I had quite a shock. It was Jenny after all¹⁰.

Before I could answer, she flung¹³ her arms around me and gave me a big sloppy kiss¹⁴.

Just then Mum came in. I noticed she didn't get the same enthusiastic hug that I did.

I felt I must be a little bit special in Jenny's eyes¹⁵. Although I did wonder¹⁶ why she giggled¹⁷ so much when I turned my back to her.

Chapter Two

10

At supper time, Mum, Dad, me and Jenny sat round the kitchen table. I was really enjoying my tomato soup until...

"Don't shout or everyone will want one!" laughed Jenny.

11

Jenny scooped¹⁹ it out and dried it off. It was only a joke plastic fly, you see. Everyone thought it was extremely funny, except me.

When it came to crackers and cheese, I had trouble taking a bite.

12

I might have known²¹ — the cheese was another of Jenny's jokes. It was made of rubber.

I kept an eye on Jenny from then on. I wasn't going to be fooled again. "All right, no more pranks²²!" Jenny promised.

13

"Okay," I agreed. But I should have known better.

As I sunk²³ into the armchair, a rude noise echoed²⁴ round the room.

14

Jenny fell about laughing. She had even brought a whoopee²⁵ cushion²⁶ with her, it seemed.

With all her practical jokes²⁷, Jenny had certainly changed. I began to think the old Jenny wasn't so bad after all.

15

"As you wish," said Jenny casually²⁸.

"Promise not to stick a silly sign²⁹ on my back?" I asked.

16

"Cross my heart³⁰," replied Jenny. So with that, I went to give her a little peck³¹...

...but as I leant over, I felt a squirt³² of water up my nose.

17
“Do you like my squirting rose?” she giggled. I didn’t bother to answer³³.

“Goodnight, Jenny,” I said at last when I’d dried my face.
“Night night, sleep tight, mind the bugs³⁴ don’t bite³⁵!” chanted³⁶ Jenny.

Chapter Three

18
Next morning as I lay in bed, I was wary of³⁷ the day ahead with Jenny.

Would there be itching³⁸ powder³⁹ in my underwear?

Would the soap leave my face dirty?

Would my fried egg be made of plastic?

19
I felt rather nervous as I got dressed and washed. But nothing dreadful happened. When I went downstairs, Jenny was already there.

I sat down very carefully. I wasn’t going to be caught out again.

20
As I poured⁴⁰ milk on my cereal, I half expected the breakfast bowl⁴¹ to explode⁴².

But I still didn’t trust Jenny. She was far too quiet.

“Well, what shall we do today?” asked Mum as she sipped⁴⁴ her tea. I didn’t want Jenny to play any more silly jokes on me, so I quickly made a suggestion. “How about going horse riding?”

“GREAT!” said Jenny.

“Great!” said Mum.

“Er... great,” I said.

So Mum drove us to the local riding centre.

Of course, Jenny was more used to horses than I was...

...but I soon began to enjoy myself.

As Mum drove us home, I was still wary of Jenny and her practical jokes. What was for tea, I wondered.

25

Chattering teeth on toast...

...followed by a plastic jam tart⁴⁶...

...washed down with fruit juice from a dribble⁴⁷ glass?

As it happened, we had a lovely joke-free tea. But Jenny was far too quiet for my liking.

26

We did play cards that evening. Jenny won every game. I was sure those cards were marked.

I was tired after all that riding, and every bone⁴⁸ in my body ached⁴⁹. I decided on an early night. "Goodnight," I said to Jenny. She didn't ask for a kiss this time. She just sang,

27

Chapter Four

28

The following morning, I felt certain Jenny was brewing up⁵⁰ some major practical joke.

Would it be stink⁵¹ bombs in the bathroom?

Or an ink blot⁵² on the new carpet?

Or sneezing⁵³ powder on the napkins?

But whatever Jenny had planned, I was determined⁵⁴ I wouldn't be fooled again.

After breakfast we discussed what to do.

"How about visiting the Toy Museum?" I suggested before Jenny could speak.

"Great!" said Jenny.
"Great!" said Mum.
"Er... great." I said.

Actually there was a lot more in the museum than dolls and dolls' houses.

31

32

(Mind you, some of those dolls' houses were fairly⁵⁶ amazing⁵⁷!)

Back home, we all tucked⁵⁸ into a takeaway. I was almost beginning to forget Jenny's practical jokes.

I even beat Jenny at cards that evening — marked cards or no marked cards.

But it wasn't.

"Goodnight, Jenny," I said at last. "Night night, sleep tight, mind the bugs don't bite!" came the familiar reply.

And when Jenny offered me a toffee⁵⁹ ...

...it only just crossed my mind⁶⁰ that it might be a jump-apart sweet.

As I got ready for bed, Jenny's words echoed in my head. "That's it!" I thought. "Jenny is up to her tricks after all. I bet⁶¹ she's put joke beetles⁶² in my bed." I pulled back the duvet⁶³ carefully...

...but I couldn't find a single bug.
What was Jenny up to?
It bothered me all night long.

So even before we had breakfast,
I made a suggestion.

"Great!" said Jenny.

"Great!" said Mum.

"Er... great," I said.

Chapter Five

Next morning, I was convinced⁶⁴ Jenny was planning some super-mega practical joke for her final day with us.

After breakfast Mum brought down a bundle⁶⁵ of old clothes, curtains and bits⁶⁶ and pieces.

41
It was surprisingly good fun. Jenny lent me her joke disguise⁶⁸. I thought I made a convincing spy.

And Jenny was great as Long John Silver.

42
As Jenny packed her things, I asked her why she had played all those silly jokes on me. Jenny smiled.

"The real you?" I asked.
"Yes," she went on, "the one who likes horse riding, and dolls' houses and dressing up."

By the end of the day, I felt that Jenny and I were really good friends.

43
"But I like those things too!" I said.

44
Jenny was right. I didn't think I liked those things a few days ago. It just shows what you can learn in a week.

When it was time for Jenny to say goodbye, I felt strangely sad.

45

"Don't worry," said Mum when she had gone. "Jenny can come again soon."

That night, when I climbed into bed,
I pulled back the duvet, and guess what?

46

Needless to say, it was one of Jenny's joke tarantulas.

47

"Hmph!" I thought as I tried to squash⁷⁰
it flat, "Jenny did catch me out again after all!"

The End

Chapter One

I. Pre-reading task

How often do you visit your relatives and friends? Why? Why not?
 Do your relatives and friends often visit your place? Why do you think people invite guests?

II. Read Chapter One (p. 43–45)

This is a story about my Grandad. He lives in an amazing¹ house in the middle of town.

It's easy to spot Grandad's house. It's the one with all the statues and garden gnomes² outside.

And inside, Grandad's house is full of junk³. From top to bottom it's crammed⁴ with fascinating⁵ things.

Grandad has collected useless objects for as long as he can remember. And he never throws anything away.

Even Grandad's garden shed⁷ is full of junk. One day, during my half-term, I was rooting around⁸ and I came across a rusty⁹ old bicycle.

6

"Bless me!¹⁰" said Grandad. "If it isn't my old boneshaker bicycle!"

7

"How old is it?" I asked.
 "Well, let's see," said Grandad.
 "I bought it over fifty years ago — and it was second-hand¹¹ even then!"

"Let's get it going again," I suggested.

8

"So I could," said Grandad.

"So it is," said Grandad.

So we dusted it down and we cleaned it up. We mended the punctures and we pumped up the tyres.

At last it was ready to try out. Grandad felt a bit wobbly at first.

We polished the saddle and we washed down the mudguards. We checked the brakes and we oiled the wheels.

And sure enough, Grandad soon got the hang of it again.

Grandad was so pleased with his bike, we decided to go on a cycle ride the next day.

Chapter Two

13

The following day I met Grandad. We cycled to the outskirts of town.

14

After a while, Grandad began to lag behind²⁵. I could see he was finding it hard going.

“Shall we turn back now?” I asked.

15

“Not likely!” said Grandad rather out of breath. “Look at that sign over there.”

Grandad can never resist²⁶ the thought of buying more useless objects, so we cycled on.

16

Luckily it was all downhill to Clover Field. We propped up²⁷ our bikes and started looking at the stalls²⁸.

17
Almost immediately Grandad spotted something he liked.

18
Grandad paid the lady fifty pence for the clock and we moved on. But as we headed for the next stall, we noticed someone fiddling with Grandad's bike.

19
The stranger was taken by surprise.

20
“I thought this old bicycle was for sale,” he explained.
“Well, it's not!” said Grandad rather crossly.

“Oh, that's a shame,” sighed the man.

Grandad shook his head.

The man thought for a moment...

"How about a hundred pounds?"
he asked.

Grandad was a little taken aback³⁰.
But he still shook his head.
The man thought for another moment...

I whistled³¹. Two hundred and fifty pounds is a lot of money!

"He must be batty³³ offering me all that money for my old boneshaker bike," said Grandad. But secretly I thought Grandad must be batty to turn down the offer!

We put the clock in Grandad's saddle bag and left for home.

But Grandad *still refused*³².

"Oh well," said the stranger. "If you change your mind, please get in touch. My name's Mr Bell, by the way." He said goodbye and gave Grandad his card.

The return journey³⁴ seemed even harder work for Grandad.

"I'm not sure cycling is such a good idea," he said as we reached his front gate³⁵.

I helped Grandad off his bike and we went indoors.

25

Grandad put the clock on the mantelpiece and tucked the card from Mr Bell behind it.

We put our feet up and sipped³⁶ our tea. "I'll call round tomorrow," I said after a while.

26

But Grandad was so lost in thought I don't think he heard me.

Chapter Three

27

The next day Grandad greeted me with a huge grin.

"Hello," he beamed. "We're going on another bicycle ride."

"Where are we going?" I asked. "Just follow my directions!" said Grandad as we set off.

28

After half an hour, I hadn't a clue³⁷ where we were.

29

But then I spotted a sign and it all became clear.

We parked our bikes and went inside.

30

The museum was marvellous³⁸. I'd never seen so many bicycles.

31

There were bikes and trikes³⁹ of every size, shape, colour and age.

32

As Grandad was admiring a modern racing bike, I noticed someone outside on an old Penny Farthing. I looked again and saw it was Mr Bell.

Chapter Four

After a while, Mr Bell came inside. He soon recognised us. "Well if it's not my friends from the car boot sale!" he exclaimed.

"I hope you're enjoying my museum. It's the finest in the land," said Mr Bell proudly. But then he looked sad. "There is a gap here, though," he sighed. He pointed to an empty stand.

"Is that what mine is?" asked Grandad. Mr Bell nodded. Grandad cleared his throat...

"Another bike?" repeated Mr Bell looking interested.

Grandad explained.

37

Mr Bell began to brighten up.

38

He excitedly led us to his shop at the back of the museum.

There were stacks⁴¹ and stacks of new bicycles.

"I expect you'd like a sensible shopping bike?" he suggested.

39

"Not really," said Grandad.

40

Mr Bell looked rather surprised, and I was quite surprised myself!

Chapter Five

But Mr Bell wheeled out the best mountain bike I'd ever seen. "This is our top-of-the-range model," he said. "It's got fifteen gears⁴² and is fit for a world champion."

Grandad climbed on. The bike seemed just the right size for him. Mr Bell opened the door. "Why don't you try it outside?" he said.

After a good trial ride, Grandad said he would love to swap his old bike for the new one.

We all shook hands and said our goodbyes.

44

We cycled home the long way. Through the park...

...over the common...

...and along the canal towpath⁴⁶.

45

And this time, I found it difficult keeping up⁴⁷ with Grandad!
